Jean Kayanakis, Senior Vice President, Worldwide Customer Service and Service Center Network at Dassault Aviation, commented: "The modified format, prompted by input from operators and the Falcon Operator Advisory Board, will permit more in-depth discussion of some of the more challenging issues facing the Falcon community while setting aside time for networking. We hope this will further expand the flow of information and feedback that is critical to optimizing the Falcon customer experience."

As at past events, this year's tour will feature presentations on the latest Falcon programs, breakout sessions for pilots, cabin crew and technicians, and plenty of opportunities to chat with vendors, training providers and other operators.

Product and service updates will focus on the advanced EASy IV cockpit, sustainability and the forthcoming entry into service of the new extra-widebody Falcon 6X, set for mid-year, along with the most recent additions to our rapidly expanding maintenance, repair and overhaul network.
