

NEW LIVERY FOR U.S. BASED GLOBAL CROSSING AIRLINES BY J&C AERO

News / Airlines

J&C Aero and Global Crossing Airlines signed an agreement for the development of a new livery design for the carrier's aircraft operated under the GlobalX brand. Under the agreement, J&C Aero engineers and livery designers developed a brand-new design for the Airbus A320 family of aircraft that are used by GlobalX for ACMI and passenger charter operations across the U.S., Caribbean, and Latin America. Following the development of the new livery scheme, technical drawing, and certification, J&C Aero's team supported the airline during the livery change of several of its aircraft at various painting facilities in the U.S and Europe.

“GlobalX already had their existing aircraft livery and branding concepts, so we were charged with providing fresh ideas for aircraft exterior styling while carefully considering all aspects of the airline's brand. We were extremely excited to be chosen as their design partner, and look forward to future projects,” shared Maksim Jurkov, Head of Design at J&C Aero.

“We approached J&C Aero for a new concept that would take the strong brand elements found in our classic livery and incorporate them into a bold, limited-edition design. The resulting design exceeded all of our expectations and is now featured on four of our Airbus A320 family aircraft,” said Ed Wegel, Chair and CEO of GlobalX.

GlobalX is a US 121 flag and supplemental airline flying the Airbus A320 family of aircraft. GlobalX flies as an ACMI, wet lease, and ad-hoc charter airline serving the US, Caribbean, and Latin American markets.
