

PEGASUS' NEWEST DESTINATION: MAKHACHKALA

News / Airports / Routes

Turkey's leading low cost airline, Pegasus, has now added Makhachkala, the largest city in the Northern Caucasus, to its flight network. With the addition of Makhachkala, the capital of the Republic of Dagestan, a Republic of the Russian Federation, Pegasus has increased its number of destinations in Russia to five and the total number in its network to 103. Operating four times weekly scheduled flights between London Stansted and Gatwick and Makhachkala via Istanbul's Sabiha Gokcen, the routes are now open for booking with one-way fares starting from £81.84 and £83.66 respectively including taxes and charges.

London flights connecting to Makhachkala via Istanbul depart from London Stansted at 13:20 and from London Gatwick at 11:45 on a four times weekly schedule on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays with the flights connecting on from Istanbul at 21:20. The flights return from Makhachkala Airport at 06:00 on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Located on the shores of the Caspian Sea, Makhachkala stands out as an off-the-beaten-track destination to discover and is famed for its natural beauty, mountains thermal pools and mild climate. Guests can book their flights to Makhachkala on www.flypgs.com/en, mobile.flypgs.com, Pegasus' mobile applications and other sales channels.

In addition to Makhachkala, Pegasus' destinations in Russia include flights from London via Istanbul to Krasnodar and Moscow, as well as flights from Bishkek to Novosibirsk and Yekaterinburg operating under Pegasus' partnership with the Kyrgyz airline Air Manas.

18 NOVEMBER 2015

ARTICLE LINK:

<https://50skyshades.com/index.php/news/airports-routes/pegasus-newest-destination-makhachkala>