ASQS, the leading provider of high-class aviation safety and quality management software solutions, announced the opening of a new office in Calgary, Canada. This will accelerate growth and strengthen the company’s customer support and partnerships in North and Latin America. In addition to the corporate headquarters in Vienna, Austria, and a subsidiary in Thailand, the new office in Canada will enable the company to continue the expansion of its global network and significantly improve customer support services for partners and clients in North and Latin America. The Calgary office will open by the end of 2020 and will be represented by senior customer support agent, Christine Schramm, who will be in charge of building up an IQSMS customer support team on site.

"I really look forward to this new chapter and I am very excited about the opportunity to represent ASQS and our product IQSMS overseas", said Schramm."

“The decision to enter the North American market was a logical step in our corporate growth strategy,” said Günther Schindl, co-founder and CEO of ASQS. “We are committed to a closer relationship with our customers in North and Latin America, and to provide prompt support and sales services. The Calgary office enables us to deliver almost 24 hours continuous client support from Monday to Friday.”

Consistently ranked among the top business places in the world, Canada offers a lot of advantages. The country has a prosperous and strong economy and a wealthy, technology driven society. Agreements such as the US-Canada Free Trade Agreement (FTA) and the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), create a competitive and international market, low inflation and steady economic growth generate an attractive business environment.

“Calgary is a great addition to our presence in Vienna and Bangkok. It is considered the 5th most livable city in the world and even more important to us, it is truly an aviation hub. The city is home to one of Canada’s biggest airports and several major operators, and has evolved to a center of innovation in the global aerospace industry. That’s why Calgary is the perfect place for us to expand our service network. We are really thrilled to bring our ideas and innovative software IQSMS to North America in order to enable future clients to reduce their operational risks and strengthen their safety compliance”, Günther Schindl noted.
