

AVIATION EXPERTS RAISE $400 MILLION TO RETURN CONCORDE TO THE SKIES

News / Events / Festivals

Décollage d'un Concorde d'Air France
An Air France Concorde taking off

Photographe/Photographer : Ph DELAFOSSE Ref : 014053
Tout usage sauf publicitaire / Not for advertising purposes

The most impressive passenger jet in history could return to our skies, with a committed group of fans raising nearly $400 million to see the supersonic wonder restored to its former glory.

The world's only supersonic passenger plane could return to the skies, with a group of aviation enthusiasts raising more than $400 million to see the Concorde fly again.

The aircraft was retired in the early 2000s, due to a combination of searing fuel prices and a much-publicised catastrophic crash in Paris in July 2000, which killed four people.

A group of aviation fans in England have raised $400 million in a bid to see the aircraft fly again – however the plane, which once flew from Paris to New York in a record two hours and 52 minutes, is unlikely to be given the green light from aviation regulators.

“The shape, and of course the performance of the aircraft – it’s an amazing aircraft, both inside and outside,” Nathalie Plan, from the Aeroscopia Museum told 9NEWS.

However, Ms Plan said she did not believe the plane would ever fly again.

“No, unfortunately not – it’s not possible anymore.

The Concorde flew a maximum speed of twice the speed of sound.

27 SEPTEMBER 2015

SOURCE: 9NEWS

ARTICLE LINK:

<https://50skyshades.com/index.php/news/events-festivals/aviation-experts-raise-400-million-to-return-concorde-to-the-skies>