In the power plant and components sector, Pratt & Whitney Canada, Rolls-Royce and Safran Turbomeca head up a powerful portfolio of suppliers. The interiors sector is also strongly represented, embracing such specialist areas as air ambulance and medivac. The importance of Helitech International as an arena for the display of latest training technologies and services is highlighted by the participation of such world leaders as CAE and FlightSafety International. Suppliers of financial and leasing services include Lombard, Milestone Aviation and Waypoint Leasing.

John Hyde, Event Director of Helitech International, said, "Helitech International presents a major opportunity for companies across the whole rotorcraft supply chain to engage with an increasingly international customer audience. The stature of our event has grown significantly over the past three years. The interaction between exhibitors and visitors on the exhibition floor has obviously played a key part in this, but so have our Business and Strategy Conference, the European Helicopter Association Rotorcraft Seminars and the Safety Workshop staged by the European Helicopter Safety Team and the International Helicopter Safety Team. This year we are also demonstrating our commitment to the future of the rotorcraft sector with the launch of the Learning & Skills Zone, an area that enables young people seeking a career in the industry to meet exhibitors on the exhibition floor in managed groups".
