Starting off our top 10 list is the Casio Mes's GW3500B-1A G-Shock. This simplistic device from Casio is not only balanced at the controls, but it also boasts of solar power capabilities for efficient power conservation. The GW3500B-1A Aviator Series also has atomic timekeeping features for up to the second accuracy. The upper ring on this watch is rubber and surrounds a hardy steel case has additional bumpers all around the watch. Surprisingly, these buttons are superbly well protected but also really large and kind of easy to push.

When it comes to durability and surviving high impact force, G-shock really knows their stuff. This black and yellow beauty is among the best aviation watches that can endure centrifugal gravity loads up to 12G. For a more upscale look and professional feel of a cockpit instrument panel, the Casio Men's GW3500B-1A G-Shock Aviator watch has a sleek golden color balance of black and yellow. Not only does this watch display multiple world times, but it has three great digital readouts and analog displays. The upper part of your digital display is fully alphanumeric and can display either the current day of the current week or even a second or third time zone if you prefer. There's also a sound, light and alarms indicator at the top for settings. The other displays can be used as stopwatches or for the third time zone.

Casio Men's MTP4500D-1AV Slide Rule Bezel Aviation Stainless Watch

For that precise and classy touch and ideal look to go along with a business suit, only a stainless steel aviator will do. The MTP4500D-1AV combines the people’s favorite analog style with the ever simplistic yet sophisticated multi-dial watch. Like most Casio masterpieces and best aviation watches, this one promises a superb mix of features and functions and very masculine ascetics. Although it is quite a looker, it is also very robust and rugged.

The Casio Men’s MTP4500D-1AV also has a slide rule bezel that rotates and should never need any maintenance whatsoever. Since it is very inexpensive, it will not even slightly break your bank in half and should thrive a lifetime; maybe even become a family heirloom item for passing on from father to son. For the man on the go, the multiple zones of time feature is a real gem. The main hands display local time while the analog display shows a secondary time-zone. They can be immediately switched by preference and with the push of a singular button. Like to get wet? No problem. The Casio Men’s MTP4500D-1AV is among the best aviation watches that can resist up to 50 meters; great for a day out in the rain or the beach.

Mens Unique Quartz Wrist Dress Watch with Calendar Date Window Phase

For the ultimate statement of gentleman’s fashion, look no further than the Mens Unique Business and Casual Wrist Dress up watch has Leather Band Strap. From definite austerity point of view, this watch is almost bulletproof. The crystal is hard and well protected. If you’re more of a maritime man, don’t fret too much about it since this product has got you covered. While most people do not expect leather band water to meet, this bad boy is waterproofed for depths under 30 meters deep. I don’t know about you, but that’s a whole lot deeper than I ever, ever wish to be when checking out what the time is. However, try not to pull the buttons out then step in deep waters since you’ll have a weak point right there. Like most best aviation watches that have leather bands, extremes of heat of cold temperatures are sure to damage the strap and also significantly decrease the life of your best aviation watches.
