TAG Global Training is pleased to announce that Farnborough College of Technology has become its first Educational Partner.

Speaking at a Plaque Unveiling Ceremony which took place at Farnborough College of Technology on 3rd July, Debbie Elliott, Training Manager, TAG Global Training, said “I am pleased to award this plaque to Farnborough College of Technology in recognition of becoming a TAG Global Training Educational Partner.

“Alongside TAG Farnborough Airport’s ‘Aviation to Education’ initiative, TAG Global Training has worked closely with the College to engage with their Travel and Tourism students and highlight the career opportunities within Business Aviation. With an increasing demand globally for jobs in the aviation sector, having the opportunity to engage with our future generation is vitally important to us, not only in supporting the community as an employer, but to help nurture and develop potential talent.”

Virginia Barrett, Principal, Farnborough College of Technology, said “This partnership represents another fantastic opportunity for the College to engage with a world-class organisation on our doorstep. The experiences our students will gain as a result of this partnership will be of utmost benefit to them as they start their careers within the travel and tourism industry.”

About TAG Global Training

A leading provider of training within aviation, TAG Global Training was established in 2007 to facilitate the training of both pilots and cabin crew. Due to increasing demand and overwhelming success, the training facility now also delivers additional courses for many operators' personnel. All TAG training courses are held at the internationally renowned training facility located at Farnborough Airport. The centre offers an unrivalled reputation for training excellence for both corporate and commercial jet personnel and boasts the very latest courses and teaching facilities which enable courses to be completed at one easily-accessible central location.
