This will enable the airline to have better cost control” says Frédéric Cros, Technical Director of Air Méditerranée. “AJW’s focus on transforming aviation efficiency combined with their technical reliability monitoring of spare parts will contribute effectively to the profitable running of our business.”

AJW currently supports 69% of global fleet operators with appropriate Airbus and Boeing aircraft types and this is fully underpinned by AJW Technique, the organisation's component repair and overhaul facility in Montreal that is focused on streamlining processes to minimise turn-times and further guarantee dispatch reliability.

"Location of spares inventory in Paris CDG is a big advantage for Air Méditerranée" adds Alexis Dufermont, VP Sales – Europe at AJW Aviation. "It is AJW's policy to ring the globe with strategic hubs of commercial Airbus and Boeing spares in support of specific power-by-the-hour contracts, and to sustain the Company's award-winning 24/7/365 AOG service and this latest contract once again underlines the outstanding value for money and excellent customer service that is embodied within a power-by-the-hour agreement."
