

NEW INITIATIVE TO COMBAT ILLEGAL CHARTERS AT A VIBRANT ACE 2019 BY TACA

News / Business aviation, Events / Festivals

ACE19 took place at London Biggin Hill Airport on 17th September and was the most successful of the ACE exhibitions so far. More than 1,100 delegates attended to see 20 aircraft on the static display and 70 exhibitor booths. There was standing room only for panel discussions on The Future of Operating, The Future of Broking and the Keynote Session on Illegal Charters.

Speaking during the opening session of the afternoon, Nick Weston, chairman of The Air Charter Association announced a joined-up initiative between a number of key industry bodies on illegal charters, a blight on the professional industry that the association represents.

The Air Charter Association also launched its brand-new broker qualification programme. This attracted a significant level of interest from brokers with a number pre-registering for the 4-level course. The programme is a mixture of classroom-based and on-airport training in a rarely available behind-the-scenes day.

Summarising ACE19 chairman of The Air Charter Association Nick Weston said “This has been an amazing day, it’s great to see a record attendance and packed conference rooms with attendees really getting involved and engaged in the key issues affecting the charter community. I would like to thank all presenters, exhibitors, delegates, sponsors and the teams from London Biggin Hill Airport and Stansted News for making ACE19 such a huge success. I look forward to an incredible ACE20 which is currently scheduled to take place on September 15th 2020”.
