Show-goers can try out the H160 experience and take a look at the H160's VIP, oil and gas, and EMS configurations more closely with an interactive virtual reality and 360° presentation.

The company's show display also includes HCare Customer Services counters aimed at presenting Airbus Helicopters' commitment to supporting their customers in every aspect – training and flight operations, maintenance and upgrades, technical support, fleet management, material management, and mission preparation.

Airbus Helicopters confirmed its position as leader on the civil market in North America in 2016, taking 73 per cent of new helicopter bookings and attracting new first-time customers. "Our goal at Heli-Expo is to show our customers what we do best: design, produce, and deliver high performing and cost effective helicopters perfectly adapted to their missions", said Chris Emerson, President of Airbus Helicopters, Inc. and Head of North America Region. "We're excited to showcase helicopters such as the H145, a flexible, high performance and maintenance friendly helicopter that is proving to be popular. The Las Vegas Metro Police Department's new H145, the first H145 for Law Enforcement in North America, will be on display," Emerson added.
